SEVENTH HOMER BY KELLY; GIANTS WIN

McGraw's Star Keeps Ahead of Ruth in Absorbing Rivalry.

BRAVES ARE BEATEN, 8-1

Can't Do Much With Barnes. While New Yorks Hammer Ball.

By DANIEL.

George Kelly hit another home run yesterday afternoon—his seventh of the young season. It was a clout into the left field bleachers at the Polo Grounds—a prodigious smash in the first inning which sent Frank Frisch home ahead of him, gave the Giants a four run lead over the Braves and left Kelly with an advantage of one homer over Babe Ruth in the most absorbing inter-league individual rivalry in the history of base-ball.

Kelly's four base blow, his terrific buble off the left field bleacher fence in double off the left field bleacher femce in the third inning and his two subsequent efforts with the but were far and away the most interest provoking happenings in a game which lost its competitive features after the opening blast by the New Yorks. The Girnis walked in by 8 to 1. While they were battering the offerings of three Boston pitchers for a total of twelve hits and ten extra bases, Jess Barnes was sailing along on velvet, holding the enemy to six scattered hits. It was all Kelly throughout the melec. His arrival at the plate with his long bat poised for another wallop into his favorite left field bleachers was the signal for salvos such as used to greet Ruth when he was at the height of his home run achievements last season.

In the opening inning the storm of applause which greeted Kelly as he faced John Watson was blended with a still greater uproar, for Kelly lit on the first pitch for his home run. It was the climactic clout of a lusty attack which immediately put the game on ice and Watson in the club house. Jack Scott pitched the next six innings and Cooney, a young left hander, finished the game. George Burns was not far behind nitched tife next six innings and Cooney, a young left hander, finished the game. George Burns was not far behind Kelly in the day's hitting doings. In fact, the outfielder was even more successful than the home run hitter, for Burns got two triples and a single. It was Burns who landed on Watson for a three bagger to start the New York attack. Bancroft walked and Frisch banged a triple to right, scoring both runners. Frisch lingered on third while Young was being thrown out by Watson, and while the other Glants were trying to make Mr. Hart believe that Holke had interfered with the right fielder.

Then came Kelly. Watson threw him a fast ball a little low and on the inside, the kind which Kelly used to breeze at in vain so often last season. But this time there was no breezing. A sweeping drive and the ball rested in the bleachers, while Frisch and Kelly enjoyed a dog trot over the plate.

Burns's Frenk Triple.

Burns's Freak Triple.

The Giants got a couple of runs off Scott in the second, which was marked by an incident which Polo Ground fans had not seen in many years, a little byplay by Barbare which stretched a single by Burns into a freak triple and gave the New Yorks a counter.

Barnes started the inning with a single to left. Burns drove one high over secott's head. The pitcher leaped high for the ball and managed to deflect it with his glove. As the leather scooted past him, headed for centre field, Barbare threw his glove at it, and hit the mark. Under the rules Burns was sent along to third and Barnes was allowed to score. Burns registered also while Bancroft was being thrown out by Barbare.

In the third, with one down, Scott and Kelly with a slow ball, and Kelly fooled Scott with a two bagger, which came within an acc of being another home run. The ball would have landed in the left field bleachers if it had not carried so far. Walker's in-field out put Kelly on third, whence he scored on Rapp's double to right. New York got its eighth run in the Bancroft and Frisch, and Young s in- miller. The score:

Rapp's great leap to catch Southworth's drive and double Barbare off first in the opening frame was the fielding gem of the game. The score:

Harvard Will Have a New Managerial System

Special Despatch to THE NEW YORK

HEALD.

AMBRIDGE, Mass., May 2.—At the suggestion of Fred W. Moore, graduate manager of athletics at Harvard, a new system of choosing varsity managers for athletic teams will go into effect next fall. The new system will be modelled after that used by ranking officers in the army, and Mr. Moore believes that it will tend to rectify the faults noticeable now.

The outline of the plan is as follows: From time to time during the competition the manager and his assistants will rank the candidates for manager in: 1, personality; 2, executive ability; 3, industry; 4, reliability; 5, efficiency; 6, scholarship.

A perfect record in personality will count 25 points and in the other qualities 15 points.

By William B. Hanna. Special Despatch to The New York Herald. Boston, May 2.—Having been strangers to the diamond since last Thursday, the Yankees were not in batting humor to-day and were beaten, 2 to 1, by the Red Sox in a close, bristling and well played game. Most of the time this season they have not been in batting mood and are less a good hitting club than a club of uncertain wallopers who drive the ball long distances at intervals, but do not hit steadily and constantly. The Red Sox made four of their five hits in the last two innings, and prominent in their conquest were two former Yanks, Tim Hendryx and the scholarly Pratt person, who never has been accused of inability to look out for number one. Their hits settled it in the ninth. Jones had Babe Ruth curbed until the ninth inning, and then a sockdolager. The Babe sent one howling far into the right fielder couldn't have hit it with a shotgun, and would have tied George Kelly of the Giants in the home run race if Kelly had not made one in New York to-day. That hit tied the score. With one out out Meusel laced a two bagger off of the weakening Jones in the same inning, but unwisely tried to stretch it, and a relay, Collins to Pratt to Vitt, nipped him. McInnis scored in the eighth on a single, a sacrifice and a two bagger by Collins, played by Ruth in a lumbering fashlon.

IN THE THIRTEENTH fashion. With two out in the ninth Pratt doubled over Ruth's thatch. Ruth played this one, too, in awkward fashion, though it was a hard hit ball. They must be hard hit when Pratt can get two bases on 'em. At first it appeared that Mays was going to pass Hendryx to get at McInnis, but after wasting one he pitched to Tim, Old Top, and Tim. ## DODGERS POUND OUT VICTORY IN NINTH

Rally in Last Inning Beats Phillies and Keeps Winning Streak Intact.

By SAMUEL J. BROOKMAN.

Fortune is said to favor the brave and that explains why the Dodgers won their eleventh straight game at Ebbets Field yesterday. They simply refused to be licked. Undaunted by the fact that they had made only one clean hit and one scratchy one in eight livnings, the daring Dodgers launched a vigorous attack in their last turn at bat pounded two runs across on two singles and a two runs across on two singles and a triple and defeated the Phillies, 4 to 3.

However, much was hoped from the revised lineup which Huggins this afternoon tried for the first time. It consisted of Tom Connelly, the speedy Tuisa staiwart, in centre instead of Bodie Frank Baker at third and Aaron Ward at second, with Chick Fewster benched. Connelly was weak with the bat and offered at the ball with uncertain jams, but as an outselder he was so far superior to anybody he Yankees have had in the outer realms this year that it was a pleasure to watch him.

The fact is, light though their hitting was, the game played by the Yanks this afternoon will win many more games than it will lose. It had life for one things. Carl Mays pitched a strong businesselike game as he usually does and was unmindful of such scattered hoots which came from such rough-necks as were present. But Sam Jones excelled him, not much, but enough to decide the issue, and Jones, pitching a smart game with a change of pace and a speeder which reduced the Yank hitters to weakings, fully deserved his victory. Jones finished stronger than Mays, with both slipping a bit toward the close after the tightest and most exacting sort of pitching.

The Red Sox made four of their five hits in the last two innings, and prominent in their conquest were two former Yanks, Tim Hendryx and the against the conditions of the second to the condition of the conditions of the

It cannot be said that the Philites got any the better of what in sporting parlance is known as the "breaks." They drove out hits with far greater frequency than the Dodgers, yet for five linnings the Brooklyns were in the lead. In the first both Williams and Rawlings singled, but both were caught stealing. In the third Hubbell doubled and Neale walked with only one out, but Rawlings fanned in the emergency and Neale was caught napping off first on the same play. The Phillies managed to score in the fourth, when after Williams had singled and had advanced to second on an infield out Olson permitted Wrightstone's rap to go through his legs.

A two base must by Neis of Jack Miller's fly after a hard run and Neale's second base on balls gave the visitors another opening in the fifth. Rawlings lined in the direction of right field, but Jack Miller, who was sprinting for third with his head down, got in the way of ball and a run was lost to the Philman Finally Meusel's single to right followed by Wrightstone's home run to the score board in deep left placed the Phillies in the lead in the sixth and brought a smile to their countenances for the first time in the game.
